

Sesany Fennie-Jones

Chief Executive Officer

Sesany Fennie-Jones, chief executive officer of Council for the Homeless, is a transformative leader with more than 20 years of experience in social services and housing insecurity. Known for her ability to build strong relationships and unite people around common goals, her career has been dedicated to driving systemic change that supports society's most vulnerable.

Sesany's leadership is shaped by her professional expertise, education, and lived experience, a powerful combination that fuels her compassionate, trauma-informed approach. She has developed and led programs focused on co-occurring treatment, supportive and sober housing, transitional living, and emergency shelters.

Widely respected for fostering collaborative, community-based solutions, Sesany firmly believes housing is a basic human right and works to dismantle barriers such as racial disparities, economic inequality, and untreated behavioral health needs, that contribute to homelessness.

Under her leadership, Council for the Homeless continues to drive policy reform, equitable housing strategies, and lasting community impact.
